Semana 22 de 2026

25 – 31 de mayo

Lo más destacado de la semana: para la semana 22 de 2026, centrada en el miércoles 27 de mayo, el precio de referencia del futuro del ICE, contrato de julio, cerró en 76,16 centavos de dólar por libra con pérdida de 544 puntos con respecto a la semana anterior (81,60 cents). La TRM disminuyó $152,40 al pasar de $3.796,87 a $3.644,47 y el precio de referencia disminuyó $711.243 pasando de $6.830.393 a $6.119.150 por tonelada. La compensación FEPA asciende a $482.510 por tonelada (Acuerdo 11 del CD FEPA 2024). Ajuste del precio interno para ventas a Diagonal: 0 centavos de dólar por libra porque el precio de referencia superó 70 cents. Estos indicadores aplican para las operaciones comerciales y del FEPA para la semana N.º 22 entre el 25 y 31 de mayo de 2026.

La actividad especulativa predominó en el mercado de esta semana. Aparte de los impactos de la guerra Estados Unidos con Irán la bolsa también se ha movido a la espera del efecto de las recientes lluvias en el cinturón algodonero estadounidense. El oeste de Texas, Amarillo, Georgia y Columbus han recibido buenas precipitaciones. Para el 25 de mayo, el Monitor de Sequía de EE. UU. mostró modesta mejora en el área algodonera lo cual es un alivio en medio de una situación que se considera sigue complicada; por lo menos, mejoró en comparación a principios del mes. Los precios del petróleo han caído por la distensión política entre los gobiernos iraní y estadounidense que, al parecer, se acercan a un acuerdo de paz que conduciría a la reapertura del estrecho de Ormuz y el libre flujo de petróleo desde la región. Los precios del crudo Brent, que superaron los 126 dólares por barril a finales de abril, se han movido por debajo del umbral de 100 dólares y pueden caer más. Pero, nada es seguro: los ataques en esta semana nuevamente han desestabilizado la región. De cualquier manera, los precios ya no llegarán nuevamente a los 70 dólares por barril. Se tomará un buen tiempo pues la infraestructura para la producción, refinamiento, almacenamiento y envío de petróleo y sus subproductos ha sido destruida por los bombardeos en el Golfo (Cotlook, mayo 28).
